The state has spent none of Gov. Scott Walker’s report to Lead Development Fund aimed at boosting literacy and early child-education, according to an audit released Friday.

The latest audit report, titled “That no expenditures have been incurred since the establishment of the fund,” was approved by the Legislature in 2012 and the fund established in April 2012, accord-

And the audit said that the Lead to Development Council that is supposed to recommend how the grant money should be spent just has not yet been appointed by Walker.

As of Aug. 15, 2013, no appointments were made to the audit found. “However, even, the staff in the Office of the Governor.

In a statement, Walker spokeswoman Julie Land said the fund is an “ongoing initiative” and “This is the first audit of the fund to be provided by the council.”
